

Live in luxury

Interior design company Celine Estates specialises in bespoke residential interiors for prime properties

If your walls could talk, what would they say about you? Your house isn't just a place to lay your head, it's a canvas for expression, an environment that reflects your personality. This is the philosophy of acclaimed designer Noor Charchafchi, the director of London-based interior design company Celine Estates.

Charchafchi has built a strong reputation among the design community, providing a bespoke service which creates luxurious homes that retain a unique personality.

"I think luxury is not just a general look but is in each detail and finish, and that attention to detail is what sets us apart," says Charchafchi. Celine Estates' goal is to transform spaces, giving each one a voice and an identity that is entirely its own.

Throughout the design process, Noor and her team of designers cater to their clients' needs, from refurbishment to interiors. The team designs bespoke furniture and often sources rare original artwork and accessories from across the globe.

Celine Estates' reputation continues to grow, having recently finished a large development in Mayfair. The company is currently expanding throughout London, as well as the Middle East, a region Charchafchi knows well thanks to her Middle Eastern heritage. She describes her Middle Eastern clients as "on the quest for immaterial value, with the experience behind the product being one of them."

Celine Estates prides itself on its impeccable service and design capabilities, which allow the company to create homes that balance elegant aesthetics, modern functionality and individuality.

The company interprets the customer's ideas and brings them into existence, producing some of the most exceptional and innovative properties in the world and turning dream homes into realities.
